CNET participates in webcast demonstrating Shipboard Navy E-Learning

PENSACOLA, Fla. – What is the cutting edge of customer service? Well, to more than 15,000 Sailors afloat customer service will soon be defined as the ability to study courses through onboard Internet computers. By combining the latest technological innovations with the Navy's distributed learning efforts, forward-deployed Sailors can stay online in education. From Navy training manuals to college courses -- this learning capability, called Shipboard Navy E-Learning won't leave ship-bound Sailors in the wake of education.

The Chief of Naval Education and Training (CNET), in partnership with Naval Sea Systems Command, Naval Air Systems Command, and Joint Aviation Technical Data Integration (JATDI) demonstrate the capabilities of Shipboard Navy E-Learning through a webcast April 10 - 12, 2001, from the 2001 Sea-Air-Space Exposition Distance Support Theater, in Washington, D.C.

CNET will feature the Shipboard Navy E-Learning capability through a live Internet webcast at www.cnet.navy.mil and {<http://jatdi.redstone.army.mil>} Tuesday, April 10, from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. and Wednesday, April 11, 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m., Eastern Standard Time.

Currently Shipboard Navy E-Learning is available to the USS ABRAHAM LINCOLN, USS CONSTELLATION, and USS CARL VINSON Battle Groups.

Other Navy commands will be demonstrating various technical capabilities live on the webcast throughout the exposition.
